Print Research Institute of North Texas, P.R.I.N.T, is a fine art press affiliated with the University of North Texas College of Visual Arts and Design. P.R.I.N.T sustains, expands and promotes the art of collaborative printmaking through publishing projects, curated exhibitions and educational opportunities.

2nd Annual Printmaker Subscription Program

The subscription program supports residencies for emerging and renowned printmakers to produce a limited edition at P.R.I.N.T with the assistance of Printmaking students and faculty. Subscribers receive an impression from the edition before it becomes available at market value.

Visiting Printmaker Susan Goethel Campbell will create a limited edition of hand-pulled prints from her Aerial series.

Susan Goethel Campbell creates multi-disciplinary work that considers the contemporary landscape to be an emergent system, where nature, culture and the engineered environment are indistinguishable from one another. Central to her practice is the collection, documentation and observation of seasonal change and ephemera in both natural and artificial environments. Her work is realized in several formats, including installation, video, prints and drawings, as well as projects that engage communities to look at local and global environments. Campbell earned an MFA in printmaking from Cranbrook Academy of Art. Her work has been included in numerous solo and group exhibitions throughout the United States and abroad.

Mission

P.R.I.N.T educates students in the environment of a professional print shop by enabling them to learn from working artists and participate in production, curating, exhibition and marketing aspects of prints.

P.R.I.N.T serves the north Texas region and the public-at-large as a cultural resource through lectures and workshops, enriching the aesthetic environment with contemporary art for exhibition and sale and providing educational events that enrich the understanding of print media.

P.R.I.N.T makes significant contributions to contemporary art by working with both emerging and established artists in various printmaking media.

Thank you for supporting P.R.I.N.T at the University of North Texas College of Visual Arts and Design in Denton, Texas.
